

Community Care Access Centres

CCACs are local organizations that provide information and help to access government-funded home care services and long-term care homes. CCACs help people to navigate the array of community support and health agencies in local communities.

In 2006, Community Care Access Centres in Ontario were re-aligned to match the boundaries of the Local Health Integration Networks (LHINs) recently established by the provincial government. Aligning CCAC organizations with the LHINs is a key part of building seamless continuum of care across hospitals, home care services, and the range of health and community services and programs.
